PLACEMENT & DIRECTION

Where to hang your Pushpa

● East (Indra)

The direction of sunrise and fresh beginnings — ideal in a living room, dining area or a child's room, where the day starts bright.

● North-East (Ishanya)

Purity and lightness of mind: keeps a space feeling open, clean and hopeful.

● North

Growth and good news — a welcoming energy for an entrance or family space.

Best in a living room, hallway, café or bedroom where you want warmth and cheer. Hang at eye level on a wide wall; the piece works beautifully as a single large statement or paired above a sofa or console.

1 The Bright Hearts

OPEN WHITE CENTRES

Every bloom holds a clear white disc at its centre — pure, unclouded happiness, the same in each flower.

2 Ribbioned Petals

FLOWING LINES

Petals filled with fine curving lines that follow their shape — softness, and the gentle energy of something newly opened.

3 The Dark Garden

INKED GROUND

A rich, hand-inked background sets every flower glowing — light is brightest when it rises out of the dark.

4 Overlap & Layer

BLOOMS BEHIND BLOOMS

Flowers tuck behind and in front of one another — an abundance of blessings crowding happily into one space.

5 The Petal Fold

TWO-WAY LINES

Within each petal the lines part and turn, giving it a soft fold — the natural, unforced way a flower opens.

6 A Field of Blooms

REPETITION

Bloom after bloom across the whole sheet, none quite alike — joy that multiplies the more it is shared.

7 Beyond the Edge

CROPPED BLOOMS

Flowers run off every side of the paper — the garden continues past what we can see, and so do the good things to come.

8 Bold Outlines

PETAL EDGES

Each petal is edged in a firm dark line — clarity and definition, so every bloom stands on its own.

9 Light & Dark

CONTRAST

Bright petals against deep ink: optimism that does not deny the shadows, but blooms right through them.

10 Woven Lines

FINE HATCHING

Thousands of patient hairline strokes fill every petal — steady care, the quiet work behind every joyful thing.
