PLACEMENT & DIRECTION

Where to hang your Sahasrara

● North-East (Ishanya)

The sacred corner of the home — ideal for a meditation space, pooja room or quiet reading nook.

● North

Direction of calm and clarity: supports stillness of mind and inner growth.

● East

Morning light and awakening — a gentle, uplifting energy to begin the day.

Best in a bedroom, meditation corner or living space where you unwind. Hang at or above eye level so the smiling centre meets you when you look up.

Sahasrara · Lotus of Bliss

A hand-drawn thousand-petal mandala for joy, wisdom & inner peace

1 The Smiling Moon

CENTRE FACE

At the very heart, a serene smiling face — contentment that comes from within, untouched by what surrounds it.

2 The Inner Bloom

FIRST PETAL RING

Fine petals unfurling around the face — awareness opening gently outward from the still centre.

3 Lotus Buds

SMALL BUD RING

A circle of tiny buds waiting to open: potential held in patience, wisdom that ripens in its own time.

4 Sunburst Ring

DARK POINTED PETALS

Sharp, deep-inked petals radiating like rays: the inner light of the piece shining outward.

5 The White Halo

OPEN RING

A band of untouched paper separates centre from bloom — the breathing space of a calm, uncluttered mind.

6 Layered Petals

OVERLAPPING SCALES

Petal upon petal, each resting on the next: the many layers of experience that build a whole, sheltered life.

7 Woven Veins

FINE HATCHING

Every petal is filled with hairline strokes, like the veins of a leaf — patience and quiet attention in each small part.

8 The Golden Spiral

NATURE'S ARRANGEMENT

The petals turn in sweeping spirals, the way seeds sit in a sunflower — the natural order that runs through all living things.

9 Light & Shadow

TWO-TONED PETALS

Each petal carries a bright side and a shaded side — the balance of joy and stillness that keeps the mind at peace.

10 The Blooming Edge

OUTER PETALS

The outermost petals open widest of all: a bloom fully realised, whole and at rest.
