PLACEMENT & DIRECTION

Where to hang your Anahata

- South-West (Nairutya)

The corner of love and lasting bonds — ideal in a bedroom or shared family space.

- North-East

Invites harmony and peaceful connection into the home.

- East

Fresh, positive energy that keeps relationships warm.

Best where people gather or rest together, at or above eye level. Keep the space clean and inviting.

Anahata · Flower of Life

A hand-drawn mandala for love, connection & harmony

1

The Heart Seed

CENTRE / CORE

The still centre, the seed from which all connection grows — the beating heart of the mandala.

2

The Inner Rosette

CENTRAL FLORET

A small flower blooming at the very centre: love opening from within before it ever reaches outward.

3

The Flower of Life

INTERLOCKING CIRCLES

The web of overlapping circles — the ancient Flower of Life, where every circle touches every other: the sacred pattern of interconnection and the unity of all living things.

4

Vesica of Union

LENS SHAPES

Where two circles overlap, the vesica piscis appears — the timeless symbol of union, meeting and the bond between two.

5

Spirals of Affection

SPIRAL MOTIFS

Spirals turning through the lattice: the warm give-and-take of relationship, energy flowing gently between hearts.

6

Blooming Florets

SMALL FLOWERS

Countless little flowers open across the design — the many small acts of love that fill a shared life.

7

Woven Bonds

CROSS-HATCH

Finely woven textures, like threads crossing: the quiet ties that bind people gently together.

8

The Beaded Path

DOTTED BANDS

Rows of beads like a shared journey — steps walked side by side, moments strung together.

9

Guardian Border

TRIANGLE RIM

Protective triangles guard the outer ring: a boundary that keeps love safe and whole.

10

The Encircling Whole

BOUNDARY

The outer circle holds every pattern in one embrace: unity, and the wholeness that connection creates.
