PLACEMENT & DIRECTION

Where to hang your Muladhara

- South-West (Nairutya)
The corner of stability and foundations — ideal in the master bedroom or the family's main living space.
- South
Strength and endurance: steadies the household and guards what has been built.
- West
Settled, restful energy — a sense of security at the close of each day.

Best in a bedroom, entrance hall or living room where the family gathers and rests.
Hang at eye level on a solid wall; the woven rings are meant to feel anchoring, not airy.

Muladhara · Woven Shield

A hand-drawn woven-ring mandala for stability, protection & grounding

1 The Sunburst Core

CENTRE

A tight burst of fine rays at the very heart — the inner strength that everything else is built to protect.

2 Radiant Crown

POINTED RAYS

Dark and light points alternate around the core, a crown of alertness — awake, watchful and steady.

3 The Fine Weave

INNER LATTICE

Petal-shaped strands cross and recross in a close weave: the small daily habits and routines that hold a life together.

4 The Bold Rings

SOLID BANDS

Heavy dark circles bind the design at intervals — clear limits and firm commitments that give the whole its strength.

5 The Open Lattice

GRID WEAVE

The wide woven grid of the outer rings, like a basket or a mat — the fabric of home, threads of support crossing in every direction.

6 Zigzag Guard

SAWTOOTH EDGES

Shaded teeth run around the rim of every ring like the edge of a shield — a firm boundary that keeps harm outside.

7 Layered Depth

CAST SHADOWS

Each ring is shaded to sit above the last, so the piece rises like stacked stone — security laid down layer upon layer.

8 Woven Lines

FINE HATCHING

Dense hairline strokes fill the shaded bands — hours of patient work, the same patience that builds a lasting home.

9 Nested Circles

RING WITHIN RING

Circle held inside circle, like the generations of a family — each one sheltered by the one around it.

10 The Guarded Rim

OUTER EDGE

The outermost ring is the widest and most heavily shaded: the final wall of the shield, complete and unbroken.
