PLACEMENT & DIRECTION

Where to hang your Svadhithana

● East (Indra)

Direction of the rising sun and new ideas — ideal in a studio, creative workspace or family living room.

● North-East (Ishanya)

The water corner: keeps emotions calm and inspiration flowing freely.

● North

Clear, open energy that helps ideas move from thought into action.

Best in a studio, study or living space where you create, plan or relax. Hang at eye level with soft, even light so both the solid and lined petals read clearly.

Svadhithana · Lotus of Flow

A hand-drawn spiral lotus mandala for creativity, flow & emotional balance

1 The Deep Well

CENTRE POOL

A dark pool ringed with tiny points of light — the inner source of feeling and imagination from which every petal flows.

2 First Whorl

INNER PETALS

Small tight petals close around the centre: the first stirrings of an idea, still forming, already alive.

3 Rippling Lines

FINE-LINED PETALS

Hairline curves fill every other petal like ripples across water — the movement of feeling, softly and continuously drawn.

4 Solid Petals

DEEP INK

Fully inked petals sit between the lined ones — depth, rest and grounding that give the flow something to hold onto.

5 Light & Dark

ALTERNATION

The steady beat of dark and light petals mirrors the balance of expression and stillness that keeps emotion healthy.

6 The Spiral Turn

CURVING ROWS

Petals sweep outward in gentle spirals rather than straight rings — creativity unfolding the way water eddies and shells grow.

7 White Streams

FLOWING BORDERS

Bright channels of untouched paper run between the petals like streams — space for energy and emotion to move rather than pool.

8 Widening Petals

GROWING OUTWARD

Each ring's petals are larger than the last: ideas gaining shape and confidence as they travel from the centre to the world.

9 Ordered Rhythm

BALANCED PATTERN

Solid and lined petals alternate in a strict count around every ring — freedom held within a calm, reliable structure.

10 The Lotus Rim

POINTED OUTER PETALS

The outermost petals taper into fine points, fully open — the lotus in bloom, creativity realised and released.
