PLACEMENT & DIRECTION

Where to hang your Vana

● North

The direction of health, growth and wellbeing — ideal in a bedroom, dining room or family living space.

● East

Morning light and fresh starts: the natural direction for anything green and growing.

● North-East (Ishanya)

Purity and calm — brings the freshness of a garden into a quiet corner.

Best in a bedroom, dining area, spa or any room meant to feel restful and green. Hang at eye level; the piece pairs well with plants, natural wood and linen, and works as a calming headboard-height panel.

Vana · Canopy of Leaves

A hand-drawn foliage artwork for renewal, freshness & quiet abundance

1 Veined Leaves

HATCHED BLADES

Leaves filled with fine parallel lines that follow the curve of the blade — the pulse of life running through every vein.

2 Blank Leaves

OPEN WHITE

Between the veined leaves, others are left pure white — rest, and the promise of what is still to unfold.

3 The Midrib

CENTRAL LINE

A single clean stroke divides each leaf in two — the spine that carries water from root to tip, strength inside softness.

4 Layered Canopy

OVERLAPPING LEAVES

Leaf lies over leaf in every direction — abundance without crowding, each finding its own place in the light.

5 The Dark Ground

INKED SHADOW

Rich shadow fills every gap behind the leaves — the fertile dark of soil and shade from which all growth begins.

6 Heart-Shaped Blades

LEAF FORM

Many of the leaves swell into soft heart shapes — the tenderness at the root of everything that grows.

7 Beyond the Edge

NO BORDER

Leaves run off every side of the sheet — the canopy continues past the frame, as a living garden always does.

8 Light & Shade

CONTRAST

Bright leaves against a deep-inked ground — the way sunlight lands on foliage, and the calm that comes with shade.

9 Turning Leaves

MANY ANGLES

No two leaves face the same way; they turn, curl and lean — the freedom of things that grow without being told how.

10 Woven Lines

FINE HATCHING

Thousands of patient hairline strokes fill the veined leaves — steady, unhurried care, the same rhythm as growth itself.
